

↑2024 ↑ ANNUAL REPORT

FROM THE DESK OF Jessy Clark, CEO

Dear Friends,

What a year! 2024 was all about setting the stage for continued growth and impact, and building community. That meant enhancing our existing programming on our stages and in our classrooms, focusing on infrastructure to support our growth, and engaging new audiences in ways we hadn't done before.

We have so many people to thank: our teachers, administrative team, performers, donors, partners, members, volunteers, Board of Directors, and patrons. By enrolling in a music class, attending a concert, donating time, treasure, and talent, or participating in one of our community outreach programs, each of you supported us in immeasurable ways. YOU help us build community in a time when we need it most. In 2024 we finally felt like our old selves, but with a new energy and renewed sense of purpose.

If you walked through our hallways on any given weeknight, you'd notice our classrooms packed with excited and enthusiastic music students, bolstered by the happy sounds of countless instruments and voices.

Highlights from an extraordinary year include:

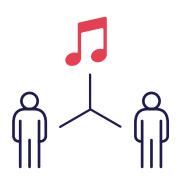

- We received the second largest bequest in our history from an amazing donor, allowing us to focus on the work we need to get done in the community.
- We have more than 50 music instructors and they taught more than 36,000 hours of music lessons.
- Our Community Outreach program, Little Swallows, created more than 70,000 musical connections in local preschools
- We saw a 22% increase in memberships, a testament to the strength and commitment of our community!
- Using our in-house expertise, we successfully hosted our inaugural Swallow Hill BanjoFest.

Our 158 onsite concerts in 2024 represented an 87% increase from the previous year. And while it was a banner year at our headquarters, we branched out throughout the Denver metro area as well. We reinvigorated our concerts at Four Mile Historic Park and audiences came through in record breaking numbers. Summer concerts and Evenings al Fresco at Denver Botanic Gardens created life-long memories for thousands of music lovers. We continued, created, or participated in programs at Clyfford Still Museum, Left Hand Brewing in Longmont, Butterfly Pavilion in Westminster, summer concerts in Broomfield, and PirateFest (argh!) in Northglenn. All in the spirit of serving the community broadly, including our incredible patrons in our neighborhood.

As we celebrate all of this success with you, we really consider 2024 as a tune up for what comes next. We are excited to continue to build community with you, and for that, we are grateful.

Jessy Clark CEO

Each month we host Musical Memories and Musical Pathways classes. Both of these free, drop-in classes are led by Board Certified Music Therapists.

community centers, retirement communities, and beyond.

In Musical Memories, individuals experiencing memory loss, their families and caregivers come together to sing and reminisce through music to increase overall brain function and encourage emotional awareness. Musical Pathways classes are designed for adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD). Music can help build new friendships, evoke joy and regulate the nervous system, strengthen neural pathways, as well as support physical movement.

MEMORIES CLASS IN JUNE, THAT

"It was nice to see a smile on my wife's face and see her singing and participating. She can look withdrawn, but it's progress."

"Music is really powerful in the brain," SWALLOW HILL MUSIC THERAPIST KRISTEN MCSORLEY ADDED. "It is stored more deeply in our memories and is also stored across the brain. Whenever you listen to music, it can activate neural networks throughout the brain that have perhaps been lost due to some memory loss."

BANJOFEST

Using our long-running Denver UkeFest as a model, we excitedly held our first Swallow Hill BanjoFest in November. The day-long fest featured workshops, jams, and a gathering of the banjo community. It was all capped off with an evening concert featuring banjo legend Tony Trishka, Carolina Chocolate Drops co-founder Dom Flemons, and up-and-coming old-time banjo innovator Brad Kolodner. BanjoFest was an unmitigated success.

"When Tony Trishka told me he'd never taught a workshop for a hundred banjo players at the same time, I knew we'd done something special," Marketing team member Barry Osborne, who helped develop BanjoFest, said with a chuckle.

WORK STUDY WITH ARRUPE JESUIT HIGH SCHOOL

Education is in our bones, and while we are known for our Music School, during the 2023-24 school year we hosted four students from Denver's Arrupe Jesuit High School as part of their Corporate Work Study Program.

My biggest takeaway from my time at Swallow Hill was having fun doing your job while still maintaining a professional workplace and attitude!

PROGRAMMING IN BOULDER COUNTY

Looking to reaffirm its commitment to serving audiences throughout the seven counties served by the sales tax-funded Scientific and Cultural Facilities District (SCFD), in September we headed north to Longmont to partner with Left Hand Brewing for a night of unforgettable bluegrass music from Wood Belly, Head For The Hills, and The Cody Sisters. Swallow Hill's Talent Buyer, David Dugan, shared that working with Left Hand was a no-brainer because of the brewery's eagerness to partner with us.

"Left Hand Brewing has created an incredible space for people to come hang out, drink beer, and listen to music with friends," Dugan said. "The beer garden has a great view of the mountains, it's a natural fit for music like this."

OUR TEAM TROUBADOUR

"I was like, what? How is that possible?" Martin Gilmore recalled his reaction about learning he had won the 2024 edition of the prestigious Troubadour Competition at the Telluride Bluegrass Festival in June. To be honest, we weren't surprised. For those of us at Swallow Hill Music, be it his students, fellow instructors, or staff members, the victory only confirms what we've known all along: Martin is a boss. In August, Martin went out and won the Rocky Mountain Folks Festival Songwriter Showcase for good measure!

As a pillar of the Denver music community, in 2024
we opened our doors to host more organizations for networking and connecting than ever before including the Colorado meeting of the Southwest Regional Folk Alliance (SWRFA), The Auditorium, and the Third Annual Boobapalooza charity concert benefiting

Third Annual Boobapalooza charity concert benefiting breast cancer research. Events like these allow us to put our expertise into action in service of nonprofit organizations, demonstrating how Colorado artists, organizations, and businesses can work together.

Now in its 9th year, Little Swallows, our early childhood music education program, is in full swing—and the impact is unmistakable. In 2024, 15 teachers taught 2,116 students at 29 preschools and early learning centers, making thousands of musical connections with children ages 1–5.

Over the past decade, we've fine-tuned the program to better serve students, families, and schools. In 2024, we expanded to new school partners and refreshed our teaching materials.

Music at this age isn't just about fun (though there's plenty of that). It supports language development, motor coordination, memory, and emotional growth. Through rhythm, melody, and movement, kids are building the foundation for how they think, feel, and connect with others.

That kind of growth doesn't happen by accident—it takes intention, care, and the right guides. Little Swallows is led by a team of dedicated, playful, and deeply skilled instructors who know how to meet young learners where they are.

MUSIC School

Swallow Hill's music school continues to be one of our most enduring and essential programs—and for good reason. In 2024, it remained a go-to spot for folks of all ages to learn, have fun, and make music together.

This year, more than 50 teachers led 555 classes and 5,648 hours of private lessons covering 18 instruments—

everything from banjo to bass and piano to percussion. Some students were total beginners, others were dusting off skills from years past, and plenty just came for the fun of playing with others.

To support this diverse community, we made several early investments in 2024 to enhance school offerings. We added more entry-level classes to meet growing demand and piloted flexible scheduling options to make learning more accessible. These changes are already helping us meet people where they are—and invite more into the mix.

And when people do show up, the benefits go way beyond learning scales. Picking up an instrument builds focus, boosts memory, and gives the brain a happy workout. It sparks confidence and connection, whether you're strumming solo or jamming in a group. The joy is real, and it sticks around.

CONCERTS & Events

Whether at our Yale Avenue headquarters, or across the greater Denver metro area, music lovers turned out for Swallow Hill Music's concerts in 2024 in numbers not seen since before the pandemic.

As our audiences expanded, we brought live music into more places like Left Hand Brewing in Longmont, and curated events like the City of Broomfield Summer Concert Series and the City of Northglenn's PirateFest, among others.

We turned our summer concerts at Four Mile Historic Park into a series of tribute concerts, celebrating greats like The Beatles, The Beastie Boys, and John Prine, and audiences responded with record-setting attendance. At Denver Botanic Gardens, a batch of new-to-the-series performers including Watchhouse, Trombone Shorty & Orleans Avenue, Las Cafeteras and Flor de Toloache, Arlo Parks, and Gregory Porter wowed audiences, creating new memories in the process.

Not to be outdone, we doubled our onsite concert offerings in 2024 from the previous year, welcoming back national and international touring favorites like Robyn Hitchcock, Alasdair Fraser & Natalie Haas, BeauSoleil avec Michael Doucet, and Ruthie Foster.

Up-and-coming Colorado artists like Birds of Play, Emily Barnes, Alexa Wildish, and High Lonesome all demonstrated why they are well on their way to establishing storied careers of their own.

Whether on our own stages or out in the community, these musical moments are more than performances—they're building a future for live music across Colorado.

Swallow Hill's volunteers are the heart behind the scenes, dedicating many hours to help us build community through music. Whether they're ushering at concerts, tabling at community events, or sharing information about our classes and programs, their efforts help connect more people to the music we all love.

37 volunteers have served more than three years, building on their experience and bringing joy to every shift. They help create the warm, welcoming environment that defines Swallow Hill, their time and talent keep the music going strong—and we're deeply grateful for all they bring to our community.

Financial OVERVIEW

REVENUE

Grants/philanthropic contributions $1,824,720

Earned Income $4,139,976

Total Revenue $5,964,696

Like many organizations, Swallow Hill Music shifted its business model in the wake of COVID-19. The reported 2024 deficit reflects a planned, board-approved, three-year strategy to position us for lasting success. Revenues rose 16.4% from 2023 to 2024, moving us toward our more sustainable model. We intentionally used reserves and increased short-term spending to restore programming, reconnect with our community, and invest in infrastructure. This approach helped us stay stable, retain staff, and continue delivering mission-driven services during a pivotal recovery period.

ANNOUNCING: The Songbird Legacy Club

Imagine a ripple effect, a single act of generosity expanding outwards, touching lives for generations to come. That's the profound power of an estate gift or bequest. We are thrilled to announce the launch of the Songbird Legacy Club, a special community dedicated to recognizing and celebrating individuals who have chosen to leave a lasting legacy through thoughtful estate planning.

The spirit of the Songbird Legacy Club is beautifully echoed in the life of Diane Lynn Fairclough. Diane, a woman of remarkable resilience and passion, understood the enduring impact of kindness. From her groundbreaking work in cancer research and quality of life studies to her joyful embrace of music, particularly the ukulele she discovered during her healing journey in Kauai, Diane's life was a testament to the power of connection and care. Here in Denver, where she made her home for 28 years, she shared her musical gifts through the Uke Jammers, bringing joy to those in retirement homes and memory care units. You can learn more about Diane's story and others on the Swallow Hill Music website.

With Heartfelt GRATITUDE

Thank you to our loyal donors, members, and supporters. Your dedication fuels Swallow Hill's work as a cultural landmark in the Front Range, ensuring that music stays accessible for everyone. Your donation helps students, families, and musicians experience the joy of quality music education and performances. We are deeply thankful for your partnership and steadfast support.
